

The Disabled Access Friendly Campaign (@DAFCampaign) – Thank you!

Eugenia Loras Blog

June 7th 2014, originally posted on Vicky Loras' Blog

http://eugenialoras.files.wordpress.com/2014/06/470459_216102358491768_1876634750_o.jpg

EUGENIA LORAS'S BLOG

The Disabled Access Friendly Campaign (@DAFCampaign) – Thank you!

I have decided to write this post as a huge thank you to the Disabled Access Friendly Campaign, started by the equally amazing Katie Quartano and Paul Shaw in Thessaloniki, Greece. It started in 2010, after an article in the Athens News was published under the title of “A day in the life of a disabled person”. The campaign was born as a Facebook page and at this very moment has 976 followers!

DAF has a great website full of free lesson materials, created by teachers all around the world – lesson plans and videos listed by level A1 to C2, according to the CEFR. They are designed to create awareness in the ELT classroom and outside of it. If you have any great ideas about lessons, share them with Katie and Paul!

A few days ago, they included me among their Ambassadors. I am deeply honoured...