

A teacher's response to raising awareness
ELT News, May 2010

Dear Paul,

Here are the letters for the website! I want to thank the Disabled Access Friendly team so much because you gave me the chance to teach my children something more important; more important than grammar and vocabulary - how to be humans. Your letter touched not only my heart but also theirs too and they still remember their promise to help disabled people. You helped me to understand what makes a good teacher and I made a promise to myself not to forget this lesson you gave me (without knowing it).

So thanks to the team again very much because you taught me how to become a better person, a better teacher and you helped my students become more responsible citizens and not little exam machines.

Take care my friend,

Emmanuel - Teacher, Thessaloniki
